ZOU YANQING

Associate of Engineering

From just average grades in his first year, Yanqing took an insightful look into his study methods and realized how he could do better. Which he did. From being a self-doubting person, he took the encouragement from his teacher, and strove and turned himself into a shining example of how young people could be motivated to do great things. In his spare time, Yanqing engages himself in volunteer work that benefits the elderly and helps spread health messages to the community. During the summer of 2019 he visited Fuzhou and the traditional architecture in its environs that deepened his understanding of Chinese culture.
